

Chapter 2

The Legal System

'How Hong Kong can continue to shine as a place where justice is readily available, where the law provides the most sustainable infrastructure for our economy and the most competitive edge for attracting international investment, where ordinary people are mature enough to protect fundamental rights and freedoms by properly exercising them and respecting those enjoyed by others, will affect the long-term well-being of the SAR.' Secretary for Justice, Mr Wong Yan Lung, SC, at the Opening of the Legal Year on January 10, 2011.

The legal system of the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region (HKSAR) differs from that of the Mainland, and is based on the common law.

The constitutional framework for the legal system is provided by the Basic Law, enacted by the National People's Congress (NPC) of the People's Republic of China (PRC) under Article 31 of the Chinese Constitution. Both the Joint Declaration and the Basic Law guarantee the continuance of the existing legal system after China resumed the exercise of sovereignty over Hong Kong on July 1, 1997.

Continuation of the legal system

Common law principles, and nearly all the ordinances that were in force before July 1, 1997, continue to apply in the HKSAR. Some ordinances required adaptation to bring them into line with the Basic Law and to reflect Hong Kong's new status as a Special Administrative Region of the PRC. Most of these ordinances have now been adapted.

The existing courts and tribunals were re-established on July 1, 1997 (though some were renamed). The Hong Kong Court of Final Appeal was established on that date and replaced the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council as the highest court of appeal for Hong Kong. All serving judges were reappointed by the HKSAR's Chief Executive on July 1, 1997. All judicial proceedings that had been instituted before July 1, 1997 were continued by virtue of the Hong Kong Reunification Ordinance.

Law in the HKSAR

The laws in force in the HKSAR are:

- (a) the Basic Law;

- (b) national laws listed in Annex III to the Basic Law;
- (c) the laws in force before July 1, 1997 that were adopted as laws of the HKSAR by the NPC's Standing Committee (including the common law, rules of equity and customary law as well as statutory law); and
- (d) laws enacted by the HKSAR's legislature.

National laws relating to defence and foreign affairs, as well as other matters outside the HKSAR's autonomy, may be applied locally by way of promulgation or legislation by the HKSAR. Currently, 12 national laws apply in the HKSAR.

All ordinances in force in the HKSAR are bilingual, and their Chinese and English texts are equally authentic. All legislation is published in both a hard-copy loose-leaf edition and on the internet.

International treaties and agreements applying to the HKSAR

Under the Basic Law, multilateral treaties can apply to the HKSAR. There are approximately 243 such treaties. In certain areas, the HKSAR can conclude its own bilateral agreements and 200 such agreements have been concluded. Lists of these treaties and agreements and the English texts of the agreements are available on the internet, at www.legislation.gov.hk/choice.htm.

Court challenges under the Basic Law

Since July 1, 1997, Hong Kong has, for the first time, a detailed written constitutional document. Litigants are able to base their arguments on provisions of the Basic Law, and challenge actions that they believe are inconsistent with them.

Legal challenges based on the Basic Law have been launched in a wide variety of cases. Constitutional challenges have included the right of abode in Hong Kong of various categories of persons, the right to use the Chinese language in courts, the freedom to travel and enter the HKSAR, the Court of Final Appeal's power of final adjudication, the right to legal representation and the freedom of speech and of assembly. The gradual development of a body of jurisprudence on the Basic Law reinforces its effectiveness in determining the rights, freedoms, powers and obligations guaranteed to the people of Hong Kong.

Arbitration and Mediation

In June 2011, a new Arbitration Ordinance came into effect reforming the arbitration law of Hong Kong by unifying the legal framework for domestic and international arbitrations on the basis of the Model Law on International Commercial Arbitration adopted by the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law.

HKSAR awards can be enforced in more than 140 jurisdictions that are parties to the New York Convention on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Arbitral Awards. An arrangement for reciprocal enforcement of arbitration awards between the HKSAR and the Mainland, based on the spirit of the New York Convention, has been in place since January 2000.

The Hong Kong International Arbitration Centre (HKIAC) was established in 1985 to be a focus for dispute resolution in Hong Kong and the region. The HKIAC provides advisory and support services for the resolution of local and international disputes by arbitration, adjudication and mediation. In 2008, the International Court of Arbitration of the International Chamber of Commerce established a branch of its secretariat in Hong Kong to administer arbitration cases in the region.

Following the publication for public consultation in February 2010 of a report on mediation by the Secretary for Justice's Working Group on Mediation, the Secretary for Justice established a Mediation Task Force in December 2010 to implement the report's recommendations and to resolve outstanding issues. The Mediation Task Force, chaired by the Secretary for Justice, continued with the tasks of implementing the recommendations of the Working Group on Mediation.

In November 2011, the Mediation Bill was gazetted and introduced into the Legislative Council to provide a regulatory framework for the conduct of mediation and address some of the areas in which the law is uncertain, such as confidentiality and admissibility of mediation communications in evidence. The Bill, if enacted, will provide a good platform for the further development of mediation and will strengthen Hong Kong's status as an international dispute resolution centre.

The Mediation Task Force is continuing its efforts in promoting the wider use of mediation and its deliberation on the setting up of an industry-led single accreditation body for mediators in Hong Kong.

The Secretary for Justice

The Secretary for Justice heads the Department of Justice, and is the Chief Executive's legal adviser and a member of the Executive Council. He chairs the Law Reform Commission and is the Deputy Chairman of the Fight Crime Committee, and is a member of the Judicial Officers Recommendation Commission and the Operations Review Committee of the Independent Commission Against Corruption.

The Secretary for Justice is the representative of the HKSAR Government in all actions brought by, or against, it and is also responsible for the drafting of all government legislation.

The Secretary for Justice is responsible for all prosecutions in the HKSAR, with responsibility for deciding whether a prosecution should be instituted in any particular case, and, if so, for instituting and conducting the prosecution.

The Department of Justice provides legal advice to all government departments and bureaux. It has five law divisions, each headed by a Law Officer to whom the Secretary for Justice delegates certain powers and responsibilities.

The Civil Division, headed by the Law Officer (Civil Law), provides legal advice to the Government on civil law, drafts commercial contracts and franchises and conducts civil litigation, arbitration and mediation, on behalf of the Government.

The International Law Division, led by the Law Officer (International Law), advises the Government on issues relating to public international law. The division's lawyers participate in the negotiation of agreements and arrangements with other jurisdictions and, as members of the Chinese delegation, at the Hague Conference on Private International Law. The division also handles requests to and from the HKSAR for international legal co-operation.

The Law Drafting Division, headed by the Law Draftsman, drafts all legislation, including subsidiary legislation, and assists in steering legislation through the Executive and Legislative Councils. It also compiles the loose-leaf edition of the Laws of Hong Kong and maintains a computer database of Hong Kong's legislation, which is available on the internet.

The Solicitor General heads the Legal Policy Division, which includes the Law Reform Commission Secretariat. The division provides legal policy input on a wide variety of topics being considered by the Government, and advises on issues affecting the administration of justice, constitutional law including the Basic Law and human rights law, and Mainland law.

The Director of Public Prosecutions heads the Prosecutions Division. The division's counsel conduct most criminal appeals, including those to the Court of Final Appeal, and the majority of trials in the Court of First Instance and the District Court. When necessary, they prosecute in the Magistrates' Courts. The division also provides legal advice on the criminal law to law enforcement agencies and other government departments.

The Law Reform Commission

The Law Reform Commission considers and reports on those topics referred to it by the Secretary for Justice or the Chief Justice. Its membership includes judges, academics, practising lawyers and prominent community members.

Since its establishment in 1980, the commission has published 59 reports covering subjects as diverse as commercial arbitration, divorce, data protection, fraud and hearsay in civil proceedings. The commission is currently considering a range of subjects, including charities, class actions, double jeopardy and sexual offences.

The legal profession

Lawyers in Hong Kong are admitted as either barristers or solicitors. Generally, solicitors have limited rights of audience whereas barristers have unlimited rights of audience in all courts. However, legislation was enacted in 2009 to allow solicitors with relevant qualifications or experience to exercise unlimited rights of audience. Lawyers practising within one branch of the profession are not, at the same time, allowed to practise within the other branch.

Hong Kong has 7 149 practising solicitors and 784 local law firms, plus 73 foreign law firms, 1 371 registered foreign lawyers, and 29 registered associations between foreign law firms and local law firms. Around 392 solicitors are also notaries public, and are members of the Hong Kong Society of Notaries.

The Law Society is responsible for maintaining professional and ethical standards of solicitors and foreign lawyers and foreign law firms and for considering complaints against these legal professionals.

The governing body for Hong Kong's 1 145 barristers is the Hong Kong Bar Association. The Bar's Code of Conduct governs their conduct and etiquette.

The Judiciary

A key element in the success and continuing attraction of the HKSAR is that its judicial system operates on the principle, fundamental to the common law system, of the independence of the judiciary from the executive and legislative branches of government. The courts make their own judgments, whether disputes before them involve private citizens, corporate bodies or the Government itself. And the Government is advised on matters relating to pay and conditions of service of judicial officers by an independent Standing Committee on Judicial Salaries and Conditions of Service.

The Court of Final Appeal is the highest appellate court in the HKSAR. The court is headed by the Chief Justice. There are three permanent judges and a panel of six non-permanent Hong Kong judges and 13 non-permanent judges from other common law jurisdictions. In hearing and determining appeals, the court will consist of five judges, and the court may, as required, invite a non-permanent Hong Kong judge or a non-permanent judge from other common law jurisdictions to sit on the court. The Chief Justice is the head of the Judiciary. He is assisted in the overall administration by the Judiciary Administrator.

The High Court, comprising the Court of Appeal and the Court of First Instance, is headed by the Chief Judge of the High Court. Sitting in the High Court in addition to the Chief Judge are 10 Justices of Appeal and 32 Judges of the Court of First Instance. The Registrar, Senior Deputy Registrars and Deputy Registrars of the High Court deal mainly with interlocutory and taxation matters.

The Court of Appeal hears civil and criminal appeals from the Court of First Instance, the District Court and the Lands Tribunal. The Court of First Instance has unlimited jurisdiction in all civil and criminal matters. Civil matters are usually tried by Court of First Instance judges sitting without juries, although there is a rarely used provision for jury trials in certain cases, including defamation. Criminal offences in the Court of First Instance are tried by a judge with a jury of seven, or when a judge so orders, a jury of nine. The Court of First Instance also hears appeals from the Magistrates' Courts and the Labour and Small Claims Tribunals.

The District Court is one level below the Court of First Instance. It comprises the Chief District Judge, one Principal Family Court Judge and 33 judges. There is no jury in all District Court proceedings. There are also a Registrar and four Deputy Registrars dealing with interlocutory applications and taxation in civil matters. The District Court tries criminal cases except murder, manslaughter and rape. The maximum sentencing power is seven years' imprisonment. Its general civil jurisdiction is limited to claims up to $1 million, or recovery of land where the rateable value does not exceed $240,000. It has jurisdiction over employees' compensation, equal opportunities and matrimonial matters including divorce, custody, maintenance and adoption. It also has jurisdiction to hear stamp duty assessment appeals.

The Magistrates' Courts process about 90 per cent of the cases in Hong Kong annually. Led by the Chief Magistrate, the team consists of seven Principal Magistrates, 57 Permanent Magistrates and six Special Magistrates sitting in seven locations. Magistrates exercise criminal jurisdiction over a wide range of offences. In general, their sentencing power is limited to two years' imprisonment and a fine of $100,000. Specific statutory provisions empower magistrates to impose sentences of up to three years' imprisonment and a fine of $5 million. Magistrates also handle cases in the Juvenile Courts which deal with offences, except homicide, committed by children and young persons below 16 years of age. Special Magistrates handle minor offences such as traffic contraventions. Their sentencing power is limited to a maximum fine of $50,000 or as specified in their warrants of appointment.

In addition, there are five tribunals. The Lands Tribunal handles tenancy claims, rating and valuation appeals, applications for compulsory sale of buildings for redevelopment, and compensation assessments when land is resumed by the Government or reduced in value by development. The Labour Tribunal handles claims arising from contracts of employment. The Small Claims Tribunal handles civil claims of up to $50,000. The Obscene Articles Tribunal determines whether articles are obscene or indecent. It also classifies articles submitted by authors and publishers. The Coroner's Court conducts inquests and inquires into the causes of and circumstances connected with a death.

In accordance with the Basic Law and the Official Languages Ordinance, the courts can use both official languages in any proceedings.

Legal Aid

Publicly funded legal aid services are provided through the Legal Aid Department and the Duty Lawyer Service. Legal aid ensures that a person who has reasonable grounds for taking or defending a legal action in the Hong Kong courts is not prevented from doing so because of a lack of means. Eligible applicants receive legal aid through the provision of the services of a solicitor and, if necessary, that of a barrister.

Legal Aid Department

The Legal Aid Department provides legal aid services to any person, irrespective of his residence or nationality, who satisfies the means and merits tests. It has an establishment of about 542 staff including 76 professional lawyers.

Legal Aid in Civil Cases

Legal aid under the Ordinary Scheme is available for civil proceedings in the District Court, Court of First Instance, Court of Appeal, Court of Final Appeal, application to the Mental Health Review Tribunal and death inquests if it is in the interests of public justice to do so.

Major types of cases covered, include family disputes, personal injury claims, employment disputes, disputes related to landed properties, contractual disputes, immigration matters and professional negligence claims.

An applicant must pass the means and merits tests to qualify for legal aid. For the means test, the applicant must show that his financial resources being the aggregate of his annual disposable income and total disposable capital after deduction of a statutory allowance and certain deductible items, do not exceed the financial eligibility limit.

The Ordinary Scheme's financial eligibility limit was increased substantially from $175,800 to $260,000 in May 2011.

For applicant, aged 60 or above, an amount equal to the Ordinary Scheme's financial eligibility limit will be disregarded when calculating the amount of disposable capital.

The Director of Legal Aid may waive the upper financial eligibility limit in meritorious cases where a breach of the Hong Kong Bill of Rights Ordinance or an inconsistency with the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights as applied to Hong Kong is an issue.

For the merits test, the applicant must satisfy the Director of Legal Aid that he has reasonable grounds for bringing or defending the civil proceedings.

An aided person may be required to pay a contribution depending on his financial resources and is required to pay back all the expenses incurred in the proceedings that are not recovered from the opposite party out of property recovered or preserved on his behalf in the proceedings.

An applicant who is refused civil legal aid may appeal to the Registrar of the High Court, or in Court of Final Appeal cases, to a Review Committee chaired by the Registrar of the High Court and comprising a barrister and a solicitor.

Supplementary Legal Aid Scheme

This scheme provides legal assistance to applicants whose financial resources exceed the limit stipulated in the Ordinary Scheme. Its upper financial eligibility limit was increased substantially from $488,400 to $1.3 million in May 2011. The scheme covers cases involving personal injury or death, medical, dental or legal professional negligence, where the claim for damages is likely to exceed $60,000, as well as claims under the Employees' Compensation Ordinance irrespective of the amount of the claim.

The scheme is self-financing and funded by contributions from aided persons and a percentage payment deducted from damages or compensation recovered on their behalf.

Legal Aid in Criminal Cases

Legal aid is available for criminal trials in the Court of First Instance and the District Court, committal proceedings in the Magistrates' Courts, appeals from the Magistrates' Courts and for appeals to the Court of Appeal and the Court of Final Appeal.

Applicants who pass the means test will be granted legal aid for trial provided the Director of Legal Aid is satisfied that it is in the interests of justice for legal aid to be granted. For appeal, it must be shown that there are valid grounds for doing so except for appeals involving applicants charged with murder, treason or piracy with violence.

The Director of Legal Aid has discretion to grant legal aid in a criminal case even though the applicant's financial resources exceed the eligibility limit if he is satisfied that it is desirable in the interests of justice to do so, subject to payment of a contribution.

An applicant who passes the means test but is refused legal aid may apply to a judge for legal aid to be granted to him. Applicants charged with or convicted of murder, treason or piracy with violence, may apply to a judge for legal aid not only for the trial or appeal, but also for exemption from the means test or payment of a contribution.

Appeals against refusal of legal aid for appeals to the Court of Final Appeal are heard by a Review Committee chaired by the Registrar of the High Court and comprising a barrister and a solicitor.

The following table sets out the number of applications, certificates granted and amount of expenditures incurred and monies recovered for legal aid cases in 2011:

	Civil Cases		Criminal Cases
	Ordinary Scheme	Supplementary Scheme
Number of applications	16 319	161	3 888
Number of certificates granted	8 193	104	2 795
Amount of expenditure incurred	$354.4 million	$4.1 million	$99.1 million
Monies recovered	$839.5 million	$34.1 million	N/A

The Official Solicitor

On August 1, 1991, the Director of Legal Aid was appointed the Official Solicitor under the Official Solicitor Ordinance.

The Official Solicitor's main duties are to act as 'guardian ad litem' or 'next friend' in legal proceedings for persons under a disability of age or who are mentally incapacitated, as representative of deceased persons' estates for the purpose of legal proceedings, as Official Trustee and Judicial Trustee and to act as committee of the estate of mentally incapacitated persons. In 2011, the Official Solicitor Office took up 275 new cases.

Director of Intellectual Property

The office of the Director of Intellectual Property, established under the Director of Intellectual Property (Establishment) Ordinance, is responsible for running the Intellectual Property Department, which operates the Trade Marks, Patents, Designs and Copyright Licensing Bodies Registries. The department is responsible for making recommendations on policy and legislation related to intellectual property protection, providing civil intellectual property legal advice to the Government, promoting public awareness of and respect for intellectual property rights, and helping Hong Kong companies understand the value of intellectual property trading.

Rights of the Individual

Legal protections

Chapter III of the Basic Law prescribes the fundamental rights and freedoms of people in Hong Kong. In particular, Article 39 (which forms part of Chapter III) provides that the provisions of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR) and the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights (ICESCR) as applied to Hong Kong shall remain in force.

Additionally, the Hong Kong Bill of Rights Ordinance gives domestic effect to the provisions of the ICCPR as applied to Hong Kong.

Protection is also provided in the Sex Discrimination Ordinance, the Disability Discrimination Ordinance, the Family Status Discrimination Ordinance and the Race Discrimination Ordinance which are enforced by the Equal Opportunities Commission. The Personal Data (Privacy) Ordinance — administered by the Privacy Commissioner for Personal Data — protects the right to privacy with respect to personal data.

United Nations Human Rights Treaties and Reporting

Fifteen international human rights treaties are applicable to Hong Kong. Seven of these (the ICCPR, the ICESCR, the International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination (ICERD), the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (CAT), the Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC), the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW), and the United Nations Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (UNCRPD)) require states parties to submit periodic reports to the United Nations (UN) treaty monitoring bodies plus other information requested by them. The HKSAR submits these reports as part of corresponding reports submitted by China, with the exception of the ICCPR which China has not yet ratified.

The UN Human Rights Council conducts a Universal Periodic Review (UPR) of human rights in all UN member states. The HKSAR's report is submitted as part of China's report for the review.

With the exception of the ICCPR, the HKSAR teams attend hearings of relevant treaty bodies as part of the Chinese delegation. In the case of the ICCPR, the HKSAR attends hearings under the leadership of the Chinese Permanent Representative and Ambassador to the UN.

In 2011, the Government prepared the HKSAR's report under the CEDAW for incorporation in China's corresponding report for submission to the UN.

Promotion of Racial Equality and Harmony

The Committee on the Promotion of Racial Harmony

The Committee on the Promotion of Racial Harmony was established in 2002. It advises the Government on the promotion of racial harmony and equality, including provision of support services to ethnic minorities, and on proposals for race related public education and publicity. Secretariat support is provided by the Race Relations Unit.

Support Services for Ethnic Minorities

The Race Relation Unit was set up in June 2002 to promote the interests of ethnic minorities. The support services for ethnic minorities, including the work of the unit, was transferred from the Constitutional and Mainland Affairs Bureau to the Home Affairs Department (HAD) in April 2011.

At present, the HAD commissions four non-government organisations ('NGOs') to run four support service centres for ethnic minorities, which started operations in 2009. These centres provide various tailor-made learning classes, counselling and integration programmes. One of the centres also provides a free language interpretation service on the telephone to assist ethnic minorities in their use of public services. The HAD also sponsors two community support teams to provide special services for the ethnic minority groups through members of their own communities. In addition, it provides funding for operating radio programmes in three ethnic minority languages, publish service guidebooks in English and six ethnic minority languages, implement the Harmony Scholarship Scheme and provides other support services to help them integrate into the community.

In 2011-12, the HAD set up a dedicated team to enhance collaboration with NGOs and local organisations to step up efforts to facilitate the early integration of ethnic minorities and new arrivals from the Mainland into the community. The HAD made good use of its district networks, including District Offices and the services of NGOs and local organisations, in advancing the cause. Various initiatives were introduced. For example, the 'District-based Integration Programmes' were launched to help them better understand Hong Kong, encourage them to participate more in community activities and facilitate their early integration into the society.

Children's Rights

The Government supports various initiatives to strengthen awareness of children's rights enshrined in the Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC).

It has set up a Children's Rights Forum to provide a platform for exchanging views on matters concerning children's right with children and advocates of children's rights, and to provide children with additional opportunities to express their views.

To raise public awareness and understanding of children's rights enshrined in the CRC, the Government has established a Children's Rights Education Funding Scheme which provides financial assistance to non-governmental organisations to promote children's rights. Administrative support for the forum and the funding scheme is provided by the Children's Rights Unit of the Constitutional and Mainland Affairs Bureau.

Equal Opportunities Commission

The Equal Opportunities Commission (EOC) is an independent statutory body established in 1996 under the Sex Discrimination Ordinance to implement the Sex Discrimination Ordinance, the Disability Discrimination Ordinance, the Family Status Discrimination Ordinance, and the Race Discrimination Ordinance.

The EOC's functions include handling complaints, encouraging conciliation, providing assistance to aggrieved persons, and running public education, research and training programmes to promote equal opportunities and to eliminate discrimination on the grounds of sex, marital status, pregnancy, disability, family status and race.

In 2011, the EOC received 3 444 enquiries and 762 complaints relating to the four anti-discrimination ordinances. A total of 162 complaint cases were successfully conciliated.

Office of the Privacy Commissioner for Personal Data

The Office of the Privacy Commissioner for Personal Data (PCPD) was established in 1996 as an independent statutory body under the Personal Data (Privacy) Ordinance (PDPO) to monitor, supervise and promote compliance with the PDPO.

In 2011, the PCPD handled 1 848 complaints and 18 680 enquiries, referred 12 cases to the Police for prosecution, handled 22 matching procedure applications and conducted 154 compliance checks. The PCPD also inspected the personal data system of a credit reference agency and published eight investigation reports on significant complaint cases.

The PCPD organised about 210 seminars for the general public and various industry sectors in 2011 to promote awareness and general understanding of personal data privacy. It also organised 52 workshops for data users, and conducted 19 tailor-made seminars for telecommunications practitioners.

On the international front, the PCPD organised 'Privacy Awareness Week 2011' jointly with members of the Asia Pacific Privacy Authorities in May 2011.

The Government, with the support of the PCPD, conducted a comprehensive review of the PDPO in 2009 to strengthen personal data privacy protection and introduced the Personal Data (Privacy) (Amendment) Bill in 2011, which is being scrutinised by the Legislative Council.

Websites

Administration Wing, Chief Secretary for Administration's Office:

www.admwing.gov.hk

Department of Justice: www.doj.gov.hk

Judiciary: www.judiciary.gov.hk

Legal Aid Department: www.lad.gov.hk

Home Affairs Bureau: www.hab.gov.hk

Home Affairs Department: www.had.gov.hk

Race Relations Unit: www.had.gov.hk/rru/

Constitutional and Mainland Affairs Bureau: www.cmab.gov.hk

Intellectual Property Department: www.ipd.gov.hk